Tehran Calm Amid Massive Show of Force

TEHRAN, Sept. 11 (WP) - The Iranian army broadened its show of force today in the aftermath of bloody anti-government demonstrations, deploying foot patrols in some side streets and in the usually crowded and colorful bazaar, which remains sbut.

As if anticipating demonstrations on the third day after at least 100 protesters were killed by rifle and submachine gun fire Friday, army troops with bayonets on their automatic rifles fanned out into some narrow streets off bustling Jaleh Square, and other areas where disturbances have occurred.

Moslem tradition calls for expression of bereavement three and seven days after a death, and authorities were expected to intensify the military presence again Friday -the seventh day.

In many parts of the city, martial law had a benign appearance today, with the usual traffic jams clogging the streets and shoppers crowding the stores in the smog-covered central part of the city.

Tehranians there seemed unaffected by the imposition of seven decrees by Tehran martial law administrators, except for the 10 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew, which cleared the streets overnight. Under the law, army patrols are authorized to open fire if a curfew violator fails to obey the first command to

No serious incidents were reported today in the capital or the pro-vincial cities.

Carter Summit Effort Is Reported 'More Intense'

CAMP DAVID. Md., Sept. 15 (AP) — President Carter has begun an "even more intense effort" to bridge differences between Egypt and Israel but "neither optimism nor pessimism is justified at this point," spokes-man Jody Powell said today.

The president is trying to refine areas of apparent progress and trying to find compromise approaches in areas where Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Mena-chem Begin are apart, Mr. Powell

The process began yesterday at a 65-minute meeting between Mr. Carter and Mr. Begin. It continued today when Mr.

Mr. Powell, briefing reporters

Mr. Powell said it would be inappropriate "to draw the conclusion of a stalemate" from the fact that there has been no threeparty summit session since last Thursday. "You are barking up the wrong tree," he said. He said the discussions were being conducted in a more "detailed fashion.

Portuguese Parties Open Debate Over New Cabinet

LISBON, Sept. 11 (UP1) — The political parties, reeling from the results of a northern municipal cations that they would stop short election, opened debate today on the immediate survival of Portugal's new technocratic government.

The sessions of the Assembly of the Republic on the Cabinet's program were due to last through Thursday, but politicians said that a final vote could occur earlier.

The debate opened with the Communists, the conservative Center Democrats and Socialists all offering separate motions for the rejection of the program. Passage of any one of the motions would require support from one of the other four major parties.

Maneuvers Seen

The separate motions appeared to be political maneuvers by the three parties to show their distaste for the new government without forcing its ouster. Ganges Floods Indian Farmland

NEW DELHI, Sept. 11 (UPI) - The Ganges River racing east-ward from the Hindu holy city of Banaras today flooded thousands of acres of farmland in the two eastern states of Bihar and West Bengal, officials said.

The situation in Arrah town, 120 miles east of Banaras, is critical, the officials said. They said that floodwaters have suhmerged the low-lying areas of the town. 15 miles south of the Ganges. and are threatening the town's main market areas.

In West Bengal, bordering Bihar in the east, troops moved into vulnerable positions in the two northern districts of Malda and Murshidahad, bordering Bangaldesh, to rescue flood vic-tims, officials said.

The two districts are facing a second wave of monsoon floods in three weeks. Continuous rain in the last 72 the Jamuns, its tributary, are fall-ing steadily along their 430-mile course from New Delhi to Banaras. Air Force planes dropped food parcels to thousands of stranded villagers. Nearly 1,000 persons have died in the flood, India's worst in years.

The planes, which fly cargo between Uganda and Europe, make refueling stops several times a week at the military airport at Benghazi, Libya. These visits to Libya, according to a source in the intelligence community here, are at the heart of the peculiar affair.

Mr. Barger testified on behalf of the acoustics firm of Bolt, Beranek and News, hired by the committee to perform the tests.

As the hearing opened, commit-tee ebairman Lewis Stokes, D-Ohio, cautioned that "sensational conclusinns" should not be drawn from the acoustics testimony.

Cartridge Cases

The Warren Commission's determinadoo that only three shots were fired was based largely on the fact that three empty cartridge cases were found nn the floor beneath the sixth floor window of the Texas Rizzo Seeks 3d Term School Book Depository, where the assassin allegedly was. The com-mission said that Lee Harvey Oswald was the nnly assassin and that he could not have fired four sbots in the space of time in which the shooting took place.

The House committee retained the Cambridge firm to find out whether there could have been a fourth shot. It is the same firm which analyzed the 18%-minute gap in one of the White House tapes during the Watergate investigation and reported that the tape was erased deliberately.

The work on the Kennedy case, involving the tape recorded during the assassination from a police motorcycle suggested in some conspiracy theorists that a fourth shot had been fired.

To find out, the analysts conducted shooting tests last month in Dallas' Dealey Plaza, where the assassination occurred. More than 50 microphones were placed around the plaza to record sound as shots were fired and bullets slammed into sandbags.

More than 40 sbots were fired, some from the depository and some from the grassy knoll where, some theorists say, an alleged second gunman was shooting. Company officials have said the analysis involved comparing the police tape with tapes of the test firing to judge whether the "sound prints" matched.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 11 (WP) — Minnesota's Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party — the party that nurtured Hubert Humphrey, Walter Mondale and a nadonal tradicion of liberal politics - is facing its greatest internal crisis of the last decade in tomorrow's primary

"If we just had to take the hammering from the other side," said Gov. Rudy Perpich, the lesder of the DFL state ticket, "we could handle that. But we're getting hammered from within."

The most ominous pounding is that which Minneapolis businessman Robert Short, a longtime Humphrey ally and fund-raiser, is administering to Rep. Donald Fraser, the bberal legislator who is the candidate, endorsed by the convention, for the remaining four years of Sen. Humphrey's term

The coalition has never been easy to maintain. Smith Makes Things Worse

It was to be assumed that the Rhodesian government of Ian Smith would react to the shooting down of a passenger plane and the killing of some of the survivors by black guerrillas. Civil war is war - when shot at, one shoots back. That, in fact, may well bave been one of the motives for the attack on the plane; to intensify the fighting within Rhodesia and thus help cripple the present efforts to create a transition government that would lead to a victory for the moderate blacks who joiced with Mr. Smith rather than for the Patriotic Front guerrillas. To be sure, the guerrillas of Joshua Nkomo who attacked the aircraft probably had other reasons: Nkomo was under suspicion among the radical blacks hecause of his secret meeting with Mr. Smith. But the effect of the plane tragedy would inevitably arouse the kind of retort that Mr. Smith is now proclaiming.

Unfortunately, the Smith administration in Salisbury is not merely intensifying police and army efforts to curb acts of terror. Efforts are also directed against the political groups within Rhodesia that are supporting the guerrilla leaders, Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe. It could well be argued that this is a logical and practical way of combatting guerrilla attacks from Patriotic Front groups based outside Rhodesia. But it is also a blow at the political structure that must eventually emerge in black-dominated Zimbahwe, whether the moderates in the Smith government or the radicals of the Front eventually triumph.

It is obvious that hitting at political groups inside Rhodesia will not seriously weaken the Patriotic Front, which bas men, material and money in the front-line states that are Rhodesia's black neighbors. Nor can it guarantee that moderate blacks inside the state will not turn toward the Patriotic Front the present drift in that direction seems to be the result of disappointment with the Smith government and its black supporters rather than any direct appeal by Nkomo and Mugabe. So the primary goal of Smith and his associates should have been to strengthen their own ranks, especially in terms of convincing Rhodesians that an equitable transition would take place.

No one can fairly question the difficulty of the task that Mr. Smith and such moderate black leaders as Bishop Muzorewa undertook. Black aspirations, white fears, were certain to mount as the transition began; Rhodesia was engaged in a revolution, social and political, and it is difficult to preserve the continuity of governmental and economic institutions under such conditions. Yet to assure the citizens of the future Zimbabwe that the majority would rule, that the minority would not retain hold by law or by force, was the essential element of the whole transition experiment, and the experiment itself was the most hopeful one that Rhodesia could under-

Now there are grave reasons to doubt the success of that experiment, in part because Rhodesia is still isolated from the good will of many of its neighbors, many of the outside powers that can influence events there. The jarring conduct of the government, the squabbles within it, have raised questions about the country's future. And to wage war, not only with those actually in arms against the government but against the ideas that are naturally in ferment in and around Rhodesia. is to strike a blow at the prospect for a peace-ful change from white-ruled Rhodesia to one in which race and tribalism will not play a

This does not say that Nkomo and Mugabe are right in their insistence that only their armed forces can determine Zimbabwe's future. For one thing, how will the two Patriotic Front leaders relate their own goals and methods to such a future? Can they settle their differences without using the same methods against one another that they are now using against the Smith regime? But essentially their insistence on the rectitude of force must be shown for the evil it holds for the nation — and that cannot be done by counter-force alone,

Colombia's Drug War

Statistics describing the volume of the international traffic in illicit drugs tend to have a numbing effect. They define huge, almost unimaginable quantities of both narcotics and money. For example, in June Colombia drug officials, with help from U.S. agents, seized the largest cache of illicit drugs ever confiscated in one raid - 574 tons of marijuana that was about to be shipped to the United States. That amount, worth about $200 million wholesale, was enough to make I million cigarettes a day for an entire year.

It is no coincidence that that record haul was captured in the remote Colombian province of Guarjira. Colombian authorities are at war with drug traffickers, who have taken over vast tracts of land in the sparsely populated province along the Caribbean coast. Those traffickers are the reason Colombia in recent years has become the major source of marijuana and a major transit point for heroin and cocaine bound for the United States from South American countries. Next month peasants will start harvesting an area of new marijuana plants that is four times as large as the District of Columbia.

The harvest won't go unchallenged. Colombia's revitalized attorney general's office, which recently has seized or destroyed tons of marijuana and made several key arrests, has organized a special strike force to stop it. And Colombia's new president, Julio Cesar Turbay, has signaled his commitment to the anti-drug campaign by urging the continuation of drug-control agreements between Colombia and the United States.

The situation in Colombia repeats the bynow-familiar pattern of a developing country trying to rid itself of the corrosive presence of widespread drug production and trafficking. Experience indicates that Colombian authorities, while trying to root out the $1billion-a-year drug industry, also must at-tempt to resolve some large related problems. These include 1) bringing the Guajira region under the authority of the central government and including it in national development programs; 2) developing crop-substitution programs for farmers now dependent upon marijuana as a cash crop; 3) building a network of roads and outlets for produce that make legitimate farming possible and profitable, and 4) thereby trying to stem the flow of jobless peasants into the cities.

In sbort, Colombia's war against drugs is a war for development. That Colombian authorities recognize the problem in these true dimensions speaks well for their determination to attack it.

Divine Guidance at Camp David

By James Reston This is very much a part of Carter's philosophy. It is mocked by his political opponents and even by many of his liberal supponers, who regard these themes as ineffec-

some influence on Begin and Sadat and makes them pay at least some attention to their common concerns beyond their domestic politics.

Prime Minister Begin indicated this in an interview with Time magazine just before he came to Camp

WASHINGTON — It is customary for politicians to pray for peace, even when they are pray for peace, even when they are preparing for war, so oobody was surprised in this secular and cynical age when Carter, Begin and Sadat asked for Divine Guidance at the beginning of their meetings at Camp David.

And yet it would prohably he wrong to ignore the religious convictions of these three particular men. If they have any one thing in common, it is their belief in some higher authority beyond the claims of national politics and some recog-nition of their own limitations and

President Carter would never have invited Prime Minister Begin and President Sadat to Camp David if he thought he could not appeal to them on philosophical and even theological grounds.
On the mundane level of practical politics, Sadat and Begin were too far apart. Carter's policy advisors thought it was unwise to ex- reasons why Israel is vitally interpect that Begin would agree to ested in the success at Camp withdraw from Sinai, the Golan David. As far as I know. President Heights, the West Bank of the Jordan, the Gaza Strip and east Jerusalem, let alone to accept selfdetermination for the Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza. And equally unrealistic to think that Sadat would make many modifications of these demands.

Good Intentions

Carter's political advisers thought that the whole Camp Da-vid idea was too prominent and too dicey. The president, they said, at least to one another, was increasingly regarded as a man of good intentions who somehow couldn't make them come true, so why take on what might prove to be at best a duhious procedural compromise, and at worst, a spectacular flop?

Carter took it oo anyway and it was very much in character for him to do so. He didn't run for the presdency because it was a sure thing. He didn't launch a campaign for human rights, or bring the Panama Canal question to the floor of the Senate, or veto the B-1 bomber and the nuclear carrier, or differ with the labor lobby or the Israeli lobby because he thought these things would be easy.

It is perhaps a fair criticism of Jimmy Carter that he starts everything and finishes nothing, does what be thinks is right even if he's wrong and unprepared. For example, it is one of the generally accepted rules of diplomacy that you never commit government leaders to a summit meeting unless their advisers have agreed in advance how it will turn out.

There was no such agreement before Camp David. Carter oot only called it, but wrote incessantly to Sadat and Begin in his own hand to bring them together without any assurance that it would succeed, or even avoid an embarrassing failure and make things worse.

Which brings us back to the im-ponderables of hope and faith and the character of the man in the White House. It should be remembered that Jimmy Carter was an ad-mirer of Reinhold Niebuhr, the liberal theologian of New Deal days.

"Nothing which is true or beauti-ful or good." Niebuhr wrote in "The Irony of American History," "makes complete sense in any immediate context of history; therefore we must be saved by faith. Nothing we do, however virtuous, can be accomplished alone; there-fore we are saved by love. No virtuous act is quite as virtuous from the standpoint of our friend or foe as it is from our standpoior. Therefore we must be saved by the final form of love which is forgiveness."

The real fireworks start, however, when, as has been the case the past few weeks, both themes dominate the news.

There was, first of all, the bungled near-capture of three mostwanted terrorist suspects — Willi Peter Stoll, Christian Klar and Adelheid Schulz. All three are implicated in last year's murders of Solicitor General Siegfried Buback, banker Juergen Ponto and industri-alist Hanns-Martin Schleyer.

For those who missed the story, let me recapitulate.
Early last month, it seems, these three alleged political killers, their appearance much changed from their mug shots on "wanted" posters, were husy chartering helicopters around the Rhineland in the guise of being a camera crew making test films and seeking locations for a TV thriller.

Indira Gandhi's Dictatorship

By Anthony Lewis

NEW DELHI - Seeing India for the first time, in all its staggering diversity of culture and tongue and belief, the visitor finds it hard to imagine the country in the grip of a relentless dictator. But Indira Gandhi was that, and she very nearly succeeded in fastening oo India not only her own imperium but a dynasty.

The dimeosions of Mrs. Gandhi's late experiment in tyranny are still not sufficiently under-stood in the West. And they should be, for they indicate how fragile the protections of freedom may be in any country. Fortunately, what Mrs. Gandhi did is spread on the record. A commission of investiga-tion under a former fndian chief justice, J.C. Shah, has just completed its work: three detailed reports chilling in their dispassiooate recital of the facts.

The press was o prime target from the moment Mrs. Gandhi as prime minister moved all power into her own hands. Americans and Europeans know that she imposed a system of censorship on newspapers, that she restricted and expelled foreign correspondents. But the messages were even cruder than

Electricity Cut

On June 25, 1975, the night that she had an emergency declared, the country's major newspapers found their electricity cut off — and could not publish. Mrs. Gandhi used the government-owned radio and tele-vision to sell her explanation of the emergency: an internal security threat that, according to the Shah commission, was in fact conexis-

She responded with actions against the particular judges, for example, transferring them to reexample, transferring them to remote courts. And then she had parliament pass a law forbidding courts to pass judgment oo the "The 20th-century state is an exliament pass a law forbidding courts to pass judgment oo the emergency rules, by habeas corpus or otherwise. All this is known in lodia now, and can be openly discussed, because Indira Gandhi made a mistake: She held an election and she was overwhelmingly defeated. But that is no reason for believers in democracy, in India or elsewhere, to relax in self-congratulation. The rescue of Indian democracy was, as the Duke of Wellington said after Waterloo, a dammed close-ruo thing. In fact, the voters were probably less moved by Mrs. Gandhi's stifling of freedom than hy another facet of her tyranny: the program of forced sterilization run by her son Sanjay. Buses in New ROME, Sept. 11 (NYT) - The bombing of a railroad train last week, which might have had tragie consequences, was taken by Italians as an ominous warning that inted to by the terrorists are about to end their unofficial summer truce, and are plotting more violence.

Police in Rome said that terrorists bombed an office of the ruling Christian Democratic Party, a carcansual Democratic Party, a car-pet store operated by an Iranian and the apartment of a rightist stu-dent early today, damaging proper-ty, United Press International reported.

The bombing of a Persian rug store run by Soleiman Hazan, was the third such attack on Iranian-related targets in two days. Police speculated that the attacks were connected with the leftist-student and Iranian exile demonstrations arriday night against the imposition of martial law by the shah of Iran. Egypt Said to Seek Japanese Aid For Building a New Suez Canal

TOKYO, Sept. 11 (UPI) — Egypt has sought Japanese cooperation to construct a new Suez Canal to be opened by the end of 20th century, it has been reported.

Egyptian officials are expected to brief Japan on the details of the $5,2-hillion project at the first Japan-Egypt economic meeting that is to begin on Wednesday in Cairo, the newspaper Mainichi Shimbuti said.

The Egyptian government, after consultations with a British technical institute, has decided to construct a new canal instead of enlarging the present canal for two-way traffic, the newspaper quoted top financial sources as saying.

The sources said that the construction site is planned on the eastern side of the canal. The proposed canal could handle more than 80 very large crude carriers daily, according to the sources.

Jeans Take On Yet Another Dimension

By Hebe Dorsey

NEW YORK, Sept. Il (IHT) — Jeans are becoming sexy and in more countries than one. Once genuine American work clothes and now a fashion staple the world over, they are going through still another phase.

In a forceful assault on a seemingly endless market, American designers are concentrating on cutting jeans in the new, elegant, spindly manner. True, the fabrie is often the same but the cut is quite different. The fit is much tighter, especially around the hut, but the highest change is along the less which gest change is along the legs, which are cut stove-pipe thin. All this would not be complete without spiky high heels, which, too, add another dimension to the old, comfortable and slightly sloppy sneakers look.

Every other designer is into jeans these days, but the most popular seem to be Calvin Klein's and Gloria Vanderbilt's, with the latter sold out at Bergdorf-Goodman last Fashion

Little White Dogs Point The Right Way in Paris

By Jane M. Friedman

PARIS (IHT) — By the end of 1978, the streets of Paris will be paved with little white dogs. Four hundred of the plastic dachsbunds already decorate Paris sidewalks in the latest attempt to get French dogs to "do their duty" where they should —in the gutters.

The dog problem — which stuffy city officials alternately refer to as "dirt" or "droppings" — has become acute in recent years and poses a serious challenge to Paris' claim to be the most beautiful city in the world. Dog owners let their pets run free. The soiled sidewalks have become obstacle courses for pedestrians.

City employees have in the past come up with varying solutions, most of which tried to ture dogs to attractive areas created especially for them. The solutions failed. The latest one involves gluing little plas-tie dachshunds to the sidewalk every three feet with a huge arrow un-der the dog pointing to the gutter. "It's partly advertising," said Charles Monterrat of the city's Ser-vice de Nettoiement, or Sanitation

Department "It's to remind people to yank their dogs at the right

One of the sexiest French brands, as a matter of fact, is called The department's gung-ho approach to the humorous dachshund is the source of a disagreement within the city administration over how to deal with an annoying and persistent problem. The Sanitation Department thinks emphasis should be on the rules and reminders to obey them. A mayoral com-mission, appointed six months ago to study the dog problem, thinks forcing will not work.

"If reminding people of the rules were sufficient," said Jacqueline Nebout, the commission head, "it would bave worked a long time

Mrs. Nebout said that the city must make it easier for dogs to relieve themselves in clean and proper surroundings. "It's always better to go in the direction of instincts" she said. "A dog instinctively goes toward trees and grass."

Mrs. Nebout has proposed digging grass plots around city trees and installing doggie patches in .new vest-pocket parks. The proposals, which were accepted by Mayor Jacoues Chirac, include an advertising campaign. "Freneb people will never walk around with a plastic bag and a shovel," said Mrs. Nebout, "but if you show them an elegant, wellknown actor using a newspaper to push the droppings into the gutter, they'll go along with that." Mrs. Nebout said that her program will be directed by the Sanitation Department on an experimental basis. Meanwhile, the department continues to sprinkle Pans with white plastie dogs. The idea was born in its Place de l'Hotel de Ville offices about a year ago. Several dog forms were tested, including a pointer. But, Mr. Monterrat said, "some of the silhouettes looked too much like a horse."

After the silhouette was ebosen, the city inaugurated a test, pasting 40 white dogs on the sidewalks of the Left Bank near the Boulevard Saint-Germain, an area plagued hy "the dog problem." According to Mr. Monterrat, the test yielded "no elear results" and the quarter is still elear results" and the quarter is still dotted with droppings. Nevertheless, the department is forging ahead, putting down plastie dogs as it installs parking meters. The area near the Champs-Elysees has recently heen endowed with 250 white dogs. Six hundred of them war.

The department hopes the visual bomhardment will trigger the de-sired Pavlovian reaction in both chien and owner.
"After World War II, people didn't have enough food for themselves let alone for dogs," said Mr. Monterrat, himself a poodle owner. In the late 1960s, the French began to experience a sharp rise in their standard of living. Today, the dog population of Paris is estimated at 250,000.

According to Mr. Monterrat, the problem is stickier here than in other cities. Parisians are considered to be individualistic and lacking in communal spirit. Mr. Monterrat said that tests with a doggie sandbox and an expensive apparatus containing a faucet and drain-age pipes failed.

Finally, last year, the city launched an advertising campaign. Posters showed a dog soiling the sidewalk while the master looked on. The slogan read, Tel maitre, tel chien (Like master, like dog). The Sanitation Department has now given up on inspiring the popula-tion through attractive installations or disapproving advertisements. "Now," said Mr. Monterrat, "we're trying to limit the displeasure of the population by applying the rules. It's easier, more economical and more efficient." Each plastic dog costs the city $30.

Nature of Crime

Beefed-up law enforcement, the natural companion measure, is not envisaged, though city police are apparently too consumed by traffie and security problems to deal with dog dirt. The meter maids, who would be a natural for the job. "are not on the streets when the dogs frequent them." According to officials, even if the meter maids were available, enforcement would be difficult because of the "fugitive" (hit and run) nature of the crime.

While waiting for results, the department continues to study eleanup problems. "It's not easy for the street cleaners to handle this." said Mr. Monterrat, speaking of the city's 5,000 street sweepers who are mostly immigrant workers. Mr. Monterrat implied they often fail to remove the dog mess.

While the prospect of a cleaner Paris is dim at this point, the pedes-trian is at teast delighted by the vi-sion of a tubular doggie which draws his eye to the sidewalk and inadvertently helps him avoid the mess. "At least they didn't make it a poodle," said one pedestrian, "a dachshund is proletarian. Anyone can identify with it."

Few Protest Plan to Kill Seals on Scottish Coast

Phase two of the six-year plan (1977-82) to reduce the seal population from about 60,000 individuals to 35,000 will begin this fall, with the approval of the secretary of state for Scotland. The gray-seal habitats are on the islands of Orkney, the Western Isles and North Rono — some of them on national males and their suckling pups and an additional 4,000 moulted pups between four and six weeks old. A cull of similar size is planned every year until 1982.

The gray-blue skin of the pups is highly prized; a coat made from their fur sells for about £1,000 in Aberdeen, but the principal rationale for the cull is the supposed protection of the salmon and other fisheries off the Scottish coast.

Fish Consumption

It is estimated that the adult gray seal consumes about 15 pounds of fish and other food a day. This, according to Aberdeen Marine Labo-ratory and Scottish Freshwater Fisheries Laboratory spokesmen, is equivalent to between 1 and 2 per-cent of the total fish catch taken by all countries in British coastal waters in 1975 (the latest year for which full statistics are available), but between 5 and 10 percent of the total catch taken within the United Kingdom's extended fishery limit.

CONTINENTAL BANK

231 SOUTH LA SALLE STREET, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS 60693

Second quarter 1978 was another record earnings period for Continental Income before security transactions was $40,101,000, a 14.2% increase over second quarter 1977. Income before security transactions for the first half of this year totaled $80,297,000, a 14.6% gain over the first half of 1977. This represents an annualized rate of return on average stockholders' equity of 15,4% in the first half of the year, compared with 15% in the similar 1977 period.

Since 1962, when we opened our first European office, we have increased our assets almost sevenfold from $4 billion to more than $26 billion. Today we are the seventh largest bank in the United States with 126 offices in 39 countries. In Europe alone we have 20 locations with specialists who are committed to serving the financial needs of the business community.

Japan Said Set on China Loan

By Henry Scott-Stokes

TOKYO, Sept. 11 (NYT) - Japmese newspapers reported today that Japan has decided to give Chi-na bank loans worth $1-to-$2 bilfrom — by far the largest in the his-tory of both nations — but it will be some time before the loans materialize, officials said.

The financial daily, the Nihon Keizai, said that Japan's Export-Import Bank would lend yen to China at 6.25 percent over 5 to 10 years to finance development of coal mines and oil wells that would export to Japan under a $20-billion long-term agreement signed in Feb-

However, officials did not con-firm these reports and the general impression is that Japan — after a short mooth of huge excitement over the prospects for cooperation with the mainland after signature of a Sino-Japanese treaty of peace about a trillion yen every year.

Since last March, he said, an "important change" in U.S. exchange-rate policy has been emerging, even though U.S. Treasury officials are "pretending that there's no real change."

Beginning in mid-1977, the IMF official said it appeared that the dollar was skidding into an "unstoppable, self-propelling decline, fed by speculative capital movements," caused in part by the U.S. Treasury's "indifference" about the external value of the dollar.

He said, however, that there's been a change in the U.S. attitude and Mr. de Vries argued that there's still "ample time" for the United States "to change course decisively" and to maintain, with the cooperntion of other countries, a single open-trading and payments system for the ooo-communist world "with the dollar at its center." The alternative, be warned, is likely to be retreat into largely self-contained regional blocs.

"The expansion of the Soviet general cargo fleet in recent years, particularly in the cross trades, preseots our shipowners with competi-tion which they cannot meet on a commercial basis and which I have to describe as unfair from the Western point of view," Mr. Burke

"The community should equip itself to say to the Soviet Unioo 'thus far but no further' as soon as it judges that the Soviet presence in its liner trades has reached an acceptable limit."

Later, a top Soviet spokesman rebutted assertions that the Soviet Union is abusing the freedom of the seas. Igor Averin, foreign rela-tions chief of the Soviet Merchant Marine Ministry, at a seminar, accused the West of a campaign agaiost Mocsow's ships aimed at papering over disputes among the West's shippers. He insisted that the Soviet Unioo is prepared to negotiate with Western shippers for an end to excess capacity in world shipping, one cause of freight-tariff wars.

China Fleet Expands

LONDON, Sept. 11 (AP-DJ) China's continuing expansion of its merchant fleet by means of purchases of second-hand ships or of vessels not taken up by the original contractor has been demonstrated with its latest move in which it paid more than $36 million for three 44,500-ton, multi-purpose bulk carriers from Sweden's Gotaverken yard, it was reported today.

China is estimated to have bought more than 100 vessels last year in a campaign seen by ship-ping circles to reflect a change in policy aimed at increased direct participation in world trade.

Vague Pragmatism

But beneath the level of Mr. Teng it appears to the Japanese that there are whole ranks of officials who do not yet know how to apply China's new pragmatic approach to Japan and who will need methods sorted out let alone the practical details of such industries as coal and oil.

To Japanese officials these are still early days. "The Chinese attitude is very vague," said a Ministry of International Trade and Indus-try official. "The Japanese government is frustrated, we just doo't have concrete figures."

Dow Develops Coal-Oil Catalyst

Dow Chemical says it has developed a new process to turn coal into oil. If it works out, the process could lead to commercial coal liquefaction by 1990, according to Dow. Dow's breakthrough involves using an inexpensive catalyst, a chemical that speeds up the desired reaction, which is partly recycled. It results in an oil product which is essentially free of solid contaminants and is low in sulfur. The process, which can make three to four barrels of oil from a ton of coal at a cost of about $80, involves grinding the coal and adding oil to make a paste. Then the catalyst and bydrogen are added while the mixture is heated, and finally, gases, liquids and solids are sep-arated. The liquid is oil. The gases include natural gas, light petroleum gas, hydrogen and sulfur com-

By Frank Swoboda WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (WP)

- Time is running out on the Carter administration's efforts for voluntary control of inflation. After nearly two years of false starts with a variety of voluntary anti-inflation programs, the White House has only three months left to come up with an effective plan for bolding down wage and price in-creases before the start of next year's major new round of union contract bargaining. The administration has oow reached the same point in the threeyear cycle of contract bargaining that the Nixon administration waited for in 1971 before imposing wage and price controls. The current lull between the end of the bar-gaining round that began in 1976 and the start of next year's new negotiating cycle is the only opporunity the White House has of intervening in contract negotiations during the president's first term without creating explosive wage in-equities among the major unions.

The biggest concern of both the White House and most major union leaders is next year's negotia-tions between the Teamsters and the trucking industry over a new national trucking agreement. The outcome of these negotiations will basically set the wage pattern for the next three years. "We've already told the adminiswhole lot more about what the Teamsters do (at the bargaining table) than they do about what the government has to say about controlling inflation," says one key un-ion leader involved in next year's bargaining round.

Expiration of Contracts

In addition to the 528,000 Teamsters whose contracts expire in the trueking industry March 31, major contracts expire next year in the petroleum, construction, rubber, clothing, electrical manufacturing, meatpacking and auto industries.

The wage "patterns" set in next year's contract oegotiations will then serve as the target for all other industries — including basic metals during the next two years. And this is what clearly worries administration economists. From almost the first day of this administration, the major anti-inflation target bas been the Team-sters. In his earliest public interviews, Charles Schultze, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, has talked of the need to break the "wage momen-tum" in the next round of contract

Sioce then, bowever, the administration has been unable to have any meaningful discussions with organized labor about an effective ann-inflation policy. "We could oever even agree on the basic causes of inflation," says an administration official.

For the past two years, the Labor Department has been trying to clean up the Teamsters Union's scandal-ridden pension funds. The clean-up effort has resulted in a variety of legal actions and could eventually produce indicaments against some unioo leaders in-volved in the pension fund. That most total breakdown in the relationship between the government and the Teamsters.

MUNICH. Sept. 11 (AP-DJ) —

"Clear signs" of a pickup in the West German capital-goods manufacturing sector are already visible, the IPO institute for economic research said in its letest report.

The institute said that in July the order backlog indicated a slight improvement in demand, confirming expectations of as early as April of positive developments in 1978.

Capacity utilization should also pick up due to production plans by industry participants for the pext three months, IFO said, adding that signs of increased capacity use should be discernible by October.

BOOKS.

BODY, MEMORY, AND ARCHITECTURE

By Kent C. Bloomer and Charles W. Moore, with a contribution by Robert J. Yudell. Yale University Press. Illustrated. 147 pp. $15 cloth, $6.95 paper.

By Paul Goldberger

RECENTLY the talented interi-or designer Joe D'urso was quoted as saying that he designs uncluttered, minimalist environments to free the mind from the distractions too many objects can cause, and he went on to suggest that his austere spaces could therefore be thought to be more relaxing. than conventional rooms. It was not a new argument — certain modern architects have been making it for generations in fact. But the public has never entirely caught on to the notion that less might be more, and today fewer and fewer architects are seeing things that way themselves.

One architect who surely does not is Charles Moore, former dean of the Yale School of Architecture, now a resident of Los Angeles, who has been writing for years against the standard orthodoxy of modern architecture. If modern architecture at its most polemical sought an ut-terly rational, cool, purist environment. Moore wants an emotional warm, eccentric one. If some architects would empty spaces. Moore would fill them up, celebrating clutter and rejoicing in the idea that we surround ourselves with objects we love. Moore shocked the architectural community in 1965 by writing persuasively about the val-ue of Disneyland as an architectural environment, and he expanded his ideas a decade later in the gracious testament to the house as an emotional statement, "The Place of Houses," written with Donlyn Lyndon and Gerald Allen.

Now Moore has gone back to the typewriter again, this time in col-laboration with Kent C. Bloomer, a Yale colleague, and architect Rob-ert J. Yudell. In "Body, Memory and Architecture," he tries to carry his ideas further still from the ordered, cerebral world of modern architecture to envision a new architecture based not on any rational system, but on the notion of the buman body as the centerpiece for all architectural forms and ideas. The goal of the authors here, as it was in Moore's previous books, is an architecture that will affect the senses and the emotions, not merely the mind. In pursuit of this the authors offer a lot of rather glib symbolism, such as telling us how the single family house can be thought to symbolize the body — doubtless true, as any poetry student who re-calls E.E. Cummings's line, "You Are a House Around Which I Am a Wind" --- will remember, but this still comes off reading more like pop psychology than architectural history. There is a lot of history here, too, also sped over rather quickly, an appealing, if brief re-view of the attitudes of philosophers to the question of beauty and the extent to which it derives from feelings rather than intellect. But if "Body, Memory, and

Solution to Previous Puzzle

Architecture" is not first-rate psy. chology, philosophy, or history, it is nonethless a valuable contribution to the architectural literature of the mid-1970s. For the book's basic point is undeniably correct modern architecture has been too cerebral, too rational, too con-cerned with appearing beautiful in an intellectual way rather than an interectual way rather usin comfortable in a sensions or physi-cal way. One of the best points in the book is the observation in the one chapter by Yudell that the human body never "fits" naturally into a building or a piece of furniture designed by Mies van der Robe — it seems more to be a presence that destroys the purity of the compositon. It is no insult to the remarkable beauty of van der Rohe's work to join with Bloomer, Moore and Yudell and suggest that there are other routes to architectural pleasure that may be more aptural pleasure that may be more appropriate to our time.

Ultimately, however, the basic rightness of the book's thesis does not obviate a greater problem. "Body, Memory and Architecture" closely resembles much of Moore's earlier work, especially "The Place of Houses" — both works bring s sophisticated and clever eye to descriptions of landscapes and buildings and cities, both works ponder the nature of architectural percepthe nature of architectural percep-tion, both works stem from a belief that the measure of success of any architect is his ability to create a strong and lasting "sense of place"

With all of these similarities, what is all that new in "Rody, Memory and Architecture?" Not that much. The book attempts to answer the age-old dilemma of intellect versus feeling by saying that the need to make the body the centerpiece of architectural creation requires that one opt for feeling. All well and good, but that is what Moore has been saying all along, and while he is no less right this time all the new goodener has this time, all the new evidence he and Bloomer and Yudell have marshaled does not make this thesis any more convincing this time around, either.

Oxford Press. Pays Old Debt

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (UPI) - Oxford University Press has paid off an old moral debt. It compensated the Library of Congress for books destroyed when British troops burned down the U.S. Capitol in the War of 1812.

At a ceremony observing the publishing house's 500th birthday, Brig. David Houston military attache in the British Embassy, presented librarian Daniel Boorstin with contemporary five pound and one pound notes, and with 14 rare antique shillings.

The currency served as repay-ment for three Oxford University Press books that were destroyed when the contents of the Library of Congress were used as kindling in the Capitol fire.

The three books, Lord Edward Hyde Clarendon's "History of the Rebellion." William Blackstone's *Commentances of the Laws of England" and Robert Eden's "Jurisprudentia Philologica," cost about $13 at the time they were published, the publisher calculated.

U.S. Open Title, Over Shriver, 4th Consecutive

NEW YORK, Sept 11 (AP) -Chris Evert became the first wom-an in more than 40 years to win four straight U.S. national tennis htles yesterday as she beat 16-yearold Pam Shriver, 7-5, 6-4, in the U.S. Open final.

"There was no way I could have gone out there and stayed on the baseline against Chris," said Shriver. "So I just tried to do what I do best — play serve and volley and come in on the short balls. But her passing short was to serve and some in the short balls." her passing shots were too much."

Evert said she was impressed by the poise demonstrated by Shriver. Nevertheless, she never felt she was in trouble. "Even though I played some loose points, I was hitting the ball well," she said. "I always felt that when the chips were down and the pressure was on, I could hit the shots I needed to win." The last woman to win four con-secutive U.S. national titles before Evert was Helen Jacobs, who did it from 1932 through 1935, and Ever was pleased to join her in the record books. "I've always said that my biggest thrill in tennis [previously] has been my streak [of 118 consecutive victories] on clay courts," Evert said, "When you're setting records, you're doing something no one else has done, and that's important. This really means something."

Two Early Defeats

Evert's victory seemed special for another reason.

After she ended a four-month sabbatical in mid-March, it was thought she might not return to the top of women's tennis. This feeling was reinforced when she lost to Martina Navratilova at East-bourne, England, then at Wim-

A medical team beaded by Dr. Eric Watkins of Loodon worked through the night in an attempt to save Peterson's life. The medical team said he died of brain damage and kidney and lung failure caused by clots and bubbles in his bloodstream released by the multiple leg posthumously. fractures.

"We did everything we could," Watkins said. "It wasn't the hospital. It would have bappened anywhere io the world.

"We worked on him for six hours on bis thighs and fool. The complications started almost immediately after the operation." Peterson, born at Orehro, Sweden, began racing as a teen-ager in 1960 and drove in the small-engined Formula Three racers beginning in 1968. He made his debut in the Formula One ranks in 1970 at the Grand Prix of Monte Carlo and the following year finished second in the drivers' championship standings behind Jackie Stewart. Io all, be competed in 122 For-

Borg's Game Is Handicapped By Bad Thumb

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 1API — An aggressive Jimmy Connors and a bothersome blister on Bjorn Borg's right thumb proved too much for Borg here last night as Connors won, 6-4, 6-2, 6-2, in the final of the U.S. Open tennis championships.

It was Borg's first loss in 50 matches, but it was not the real Borg who was beaten. Although he insisted that his thumb had not bothered him during the match, spectators knew better.

"It was very obvious that it bothered him," said Lennart Bergelin, Borg's coach. "He was in pain. Anyone could see that. He couldn't hold the maket." hold the racket."

Troubles Throughout

Twice it went flying from Borg's hand as he attempted to serve. On other shots, he hit the ball badly after apparently losing his grip. Borg was asked about his thumb as he walked off the court. "Not too good," he said with a grimace. "It hurts."

But once he reached the interview room, he exchanged several sentences in Swedish with Bergelin, then played down the injury, which cropped up Saturday and was subsequently treated with ice packs. oral inedication and a spray antiseptie.

"It didn't bother me while I was playing." he insisted, although few believed him. "Jimmy was too good today. He was aggressive. He didn't make too many mistakes. There was not much I could do."

"I don't know if he was off his game -- maybe I was on mine, said Connors, who also won the Open title in 1974 and 1976 and was a losing finalist in 1975 and 1977. "I hit the hall real solid and real deep throughout the match.

"I was fired up when I went out there," he added. "I don't know if I've ever played a match where I started so well, so aggressively, and kept it up throughout the match."

Connors did not want Borg's injury to tarnish his accomplishment. Connors was especially proud that he has now won the Open oo three surfaces: He won oo grass in 1974 and clay in 1976, both at Forest Hills, and yesterday on a hard, rubberized asphalt court in the new National Tennis Center.

Wait Till Next Time

Connors said he watched a videotape of a couple of games of his 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 loss to Borg in the fioal "It made me sick. I said to myself. "This is ridiculous — how can I let myself be so tentative?' I knew I had to be more aggressive." And he was, dominating the match throughout. Borg, who already had a

Mao Is Portrayed On Chinese Stage

TOKYO, Sept. 11 (AP) — China's late Chairman Mao Tsetung has been portrayed for the first time in the Chinese drama, the Chinese news agency Hsinhua reported.

"In the new play 'Yang Kai-hui,' Mao Tse-tung, the great leader of the Chinese people, is portrayed as a young man in the years between 1920-30 as he carried out revolutionary activities," said Hsinhua.

The news agency said, "This is the first Chinese drama to portray Mao Tse-tung in a leading role, showing him as a great leader and teacher of the Chinese revolution, and also one of the people, a dear friend and comrade of the ordinary working people."

Yang Kai-hui was Mao's first wife. She was executed by the Nationalist Chinese at the age of 29 in the winter of 1930.

WASHINGTON — I stepped ways wanted to do it but I never on a tennis ball this summer had the nerve. It beats the hell out Because that would bave taken the fun out of the game." I would reply. "The thrill of tennis is to get the ball back without stepping on the one you left on the court." I said this with so much conviction that most people would reply, "I didn't know that." "Of course. Why do you think you play with three tennis balls? You need two to serve with, and one to leave on the court so you can trip over it."

The real agony of being in a cast is that you have to listen to everyone else's cast story. I don't believe I ran into one person who hadn't been in a cast at one time or another. And when you're on crutches, it's very hard to move away when someone starts telling you his or

They were all horror stories and ranged from the fact that their bones hadn't been set right and had to be set again to how they were driven up the wall when their injured leg started itching and they had to poke knitting needles down the cast to get relief. "The worst thing," one lady told me, "is that when they take the cast off and you see what your leg looks like, most people faint."

After a while I realized that people were not impressed with how I was injured, so I devised a story which would get their attention.

When asked what happened, I would say, "It's very boring, but if you're really interested — I was on a tennis court, and suddenly this flying saucer landed by the net and a little green man got out wielding a laser pistol. He said, Take me to your leader.' I didn't know who to take him to - so he shot me in the leg."

You would think that your own orthopedic surgeon would have sympathy for someone over 40 who had suffered a sports injury. But when I returned to Washington and went to my doctor to have the cast removed, he took one look at my leg and all he said was, "Did you have a nice summer?

The Language War Continues in France

By Bob Donahue

PARIS, Sept. 11 (IHT) — The defense of language, a distinguished Briton recalled recently, is front-line duty in the defense of civilization itself. The front has a French sector.

On Bastille Day last July 14, with the drums still echoing along the Champs-Elysees, the often-circumspect newspaper Le Monde appeared with a clarion call-to-arms on the front page. "Language Is Nationality," the headline said. A selection of letters, published together at the of last week, is equally heartfelt.

Strong stuff. The enemy (in the acid terms of the July article) is dumb French snobs: the sottise and snobisme of an influential minority who accept "Anglo-Saxon linguistic hegemo-

Gilbert Comte, one of France's leading economic writers and a regular contributor to the great paper, belongs to that minority's generation. It came of age around the time of the fall of Dienbienphu in 1954, began to prosper against the painful backprosper against the painful back-ground of Algerian independ-ence in 1962, and travels, in the '70s, a world bemused by what Comte calls "incomparable American efficiency."

In an unnamed Southeast Asian capital recently, be tele-phoned his mission and heard, in English: "Here the French Embassy." It turned out that none of the Asian staff spoke French. English not being one of Comte's strong points, he found that vexatious.

Business Tongue

Elsewhere, the French head of a French husiness hranch did all his corresponding with Paris in English, the only Western tongue his clerical staff knew. A hright country girl starting as a servant in a French household was being taught English; said Comte's hostess when he raised both eyehrows: "Our language is no use here, and I'm responsible for this child's future."

In a former French colony in Africa, a French envoy responsi-hle for helping to develop the place was energetically promoting English because, she helieved, it would soon be spo-ken everywhere. Comte cals her a silly goose (une peronnelle).

Back in Paris, where French doctors and engineers make a point of declaiming in English at international congresses that have expert interpreters on call, he found English-language films at fully two-thirds of the Latin Quarter's cinemas.

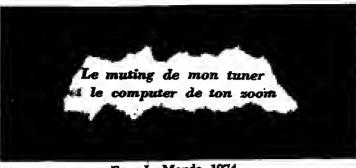

The Brushoff

He reflected that a French movie can be hard to find in Manhattan . . . where a chance meeting with a Haitian porter at guage is nationality itself, the living vibrant fatherland in each of us."

To judge from the letters, most of his readers agreed. One said he had been waiting 20 years to hear such words. A university lecturer argued against the notion that the linguistic "struggle for independence" was retrograde or reactionary.

The nationality motif invited some irony, though. Thus: "I understand the passion that Mr. Comte applies to the defense of his national language. I understand it all the better because I

From Le Monde, 1974

the Waldorf caused delight to both sides The porter was angry about American disdain for his black man's French. Comte is angry about "suicidal" Frenchmen and their "inferiority feelings." Why. he asks, when one country's elite gives up defending its culture, should the citizens of another country be expected to do it for An American reader was reminded at this point of a woman from Memphis who had given amply of her time to the running of a remote branch of the Alliance Française. She stopped in Paris not long ago and got a hrushoff when she rang headquarters to ask for help with theater tickets. The gaffe was realized, roses were rushed to her modest hotel, and still she looked hurt. "Oh, no," she said, "I understand about the tickets. It's that clerk downstairs - he won't speak anything hut English.

Comte's coda resounded like try to read and, above all, speak mine as often as I can Alas, in Paris it isn't easy to speak Breton.

Had not the language of Paris, another reader wrote, been im-posed on France by force? It followed from Comte's argument, opined another, that Breton, Corsican or Occitanian patriots were entitled to destroy the French Academy with plastic

Unlike London, where whimsical controversy over Americanisms is a mainstay of the letters page in the Times, Paris contains its frustration for release in episodic bursts. Rarely have these been known to distress the countless Americans who visit or reside here.

Challenge

France was still great when Americans first invaded, during and especially after World War I. In the next war, the invasion was quite a different matter; but Paris was still the seat of a world empire. The third invasion, by U.S. husiness, technology and media arts in the 60s, challenged the language of a second-rank power that now knew it.

Polemicist Etiemble put the word franglais into France's vocabulary with a 1964 best seller. Metro advertisements warned the public in 1969, "If tomorrow French should become a dead language, you would all be the assassins." President Georges Pompidou oversaw official cfforts to put down Anglicisms.

Under President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, a law was pro-mulgated in 1976 making French compulsory in advertising. A controversy raged hriefly last year over the use of English in scientific publications. Comte has now reopened the wound. Some of the letters make harsh points:

"You can't go against people's desire to speak the languages they genuinely need." English must be mastered "if we want to do business with foreign countries." • Isn't the important thing that people in the world should be able to communicate, even if it has to be in English?" · Technologically and territorially. France is a small country, whether we Frenchmen like it or not." Bystanders can be perplexed by this sort of disputation. Everybody is right. Especially, per-haps, Comte himself, when he says that a healthy approach to the world presupposes self-confi-

A post-imperial Frenchman is emerging today on the heels of a generation that had a few excuses, and some enticement, for dented self-confidence. The France of le management, pseu-do-Kennedy politicians and ugly new homes to replace ugly old ones is dead or dying. Vive la difference, as the American saying

Gen. de Gaulle spoke to the German people in Bonn in German and in Latin America he spoke Spanish. Today, Frenchmen from the president on down feel easier about exhibiting their English, too, so maybe the French sector of the front is more self-assured than Comte and his wife, Louise L'Heureux, have been divorced in Montreal, with Levesque agreeing to pay $27,800 a year in alimony. Associate Chief Justice James Hugessen read the agreement aloud in Quebee Superior Court shortly after Levesque, 56, who originally filed for divorce in July, 1977, signed it. The divorce, granted on grounds of permanent marriage breakdown, was not contested by Mrs. Levesque, who did not appear. Her presence in court was not required because Levesque was the one who initiated proceedings. Levesque is known for his advocacy of inde-pendence for Canada's Frenchspeaking province of Quebec. Besides the alimony payments, which amount to $2,316.66 g month, the agreement requires Levesque to pay $2,500 to his former wife to help defray her court expenses. It gives her ownership over all "furniture, works of art and other objects" at their former residence in the Montreal area of Outremont and makes her the beneficiary of all Levesque's insurance policies, of which eight are listed in the settlement walked five kilometers on a stepladder and thus improved his own "record" which he established last year, a Prague newspaper reported. The paper said that it took V. Smola 2 hours and 50 minutes to cover the distance on the ladder. The paper, Svohodne Slovo, added that there were six entries, four painters, a baker and a driver. Last year, Smola ladder-walked the distance in 3 hours and 15 minutes,
